Dr. Frangopol is the first Fazlur R. Khan Endowed Chair of Structural Engineering and Architecture. He is a leading international figure in life-cycle performance, maintenance, reliability and optimization of structural systems, whose work has had a significant impact on bridge and infrastructure engineering.

He was inducted as a Distinguished Member of the ASCE in 2010, and became an Inaugural Fellow of the Structural Engineering Institute of ASCE in 2012. Dr. Frangopol has won numerous other professional awards, including four honorary doctorates (most recent in April 2016 from the Polytechnic University of Milan) and 12 honorary professorships from international institutions. He is also the Founding President of both the International Association for Bridge Maintenance and Safety (IABMAS) and the International Association for Life Cycle Civil Engineering (IALCCE), and the Founding Editor-in-Chief of the international peer-reviewed journal Structure and Infrastructure Engineering.
