

A photograph of ancient stone ruins, likely from Cambodia. A prominent feature is a large, muscular stone arm or hand carved into the structure, reaching out. The ruins are made of weathered, moss-covered stone blocks. The background shows lush green trees.

Discover Cambodian Culture!

Tuesday, Jan. 24

5:30 pm

GU lounge, 215 Coxe Hall

Professor Sothy Eng will offer a presentation about his native land, and students who have traveled there will share stories and pictures from their trips. With free food from the region!

Hosted by the Caring for Cambodia partnership, the Fulbright Student Association, and the Global Union

