Nation's capital takes huge stride toward eliminating combined sewer overflows

CIVIL ENGINEERING SOURCE
The Potomac River Tunnel, with an $819 million price tag, is the most expensive component of a nearly $3 billion program to control an ongoing problem in Washington, D.C. When will the project be complete?

ASCE establishes medal for life-cycle engineering of civil structures

STRUCTURE MAGAZINE
Dan M. Frangopol has been honored by the Society with the establishment of the honor in his name.